Summer boredom is real and kitty feels it hardest

SHOP SUMMER ENRICHMENT →

Hey Cat Lover,

Here's the counterintuitive part: summer is actually the most understimulating season for indoor cats.

In spring and fall, windows crack and cool air carries new smells inside.

Come summer — windows stay shut, curtains close, and your kitty's world quietly shrinks.

A smaller world means a more restless kitty.

SOUND FAMILIAR THIS TIME OF YEAR?

Midnight zoomies

Kitty stores energy all day through the heat — then burns every bit of it at 2am.

More furniture scratching.

Not destruction — stimulation-seeking. Kitty needs something that gives back.

Over-grooming.

Repetitive licking in summer is a boredom and stress signal worth taking seriously.

THE FIX IS INTENTIONAL, NOT EXPENSIVE

Rotate toys every 2–3 days. Novelty re-triggers the hunt instinct even with the same toys — familiarity is what kills engagement.

Give kitty a window view.

Visual stimulation counts even through closed glass — birds, movement, and outdoor activity keep kitty's brain switched on.

10 minutes of interactive play, twice a day.

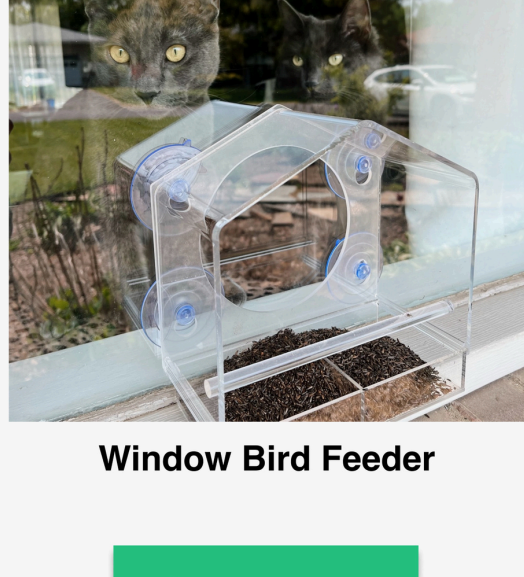

Scheduled sessions reduce nighttime restlessness more than any toy left sitting on the floor.
